

UNISCAPE EN-ROUTE INTERNATIONAL SEMINAR RECOVERING RIVER LANDSCAPES

UNIVERSITY OF NAPLES 'FEDERICO II' _ 28-30/09/2015

The Seminar aims to investigate the issue of the re-appropriation and the recovery of river landscapes, often compromised and degraded as a result of human or natural changes, starting from the case of the Campania region, which sets out as a laboratory where it is possible to test the combination of appropriate methods and techniques to actively plan river landscapes.

In this framework, adopting a landscape restoration approach might suggest useful hints to return landscapes to their natural conditions, counting on resilience, if specific conditions of sites make it possible. At the same time, the conference highlights the importance of enhancing local communities' resources in order to reinterpret and redefine landscapes.

The seminar is divided into two parts, intertwining in three study days:

- paper presentations, in which to discuss international interesting cases;

- in situ activities, in which to get in touch with territories (places and relevant actors) and to exchange ideas and experiences.

Seminar activities will be structured according to the main branches of the UNISCAPE network: didactics, researches, landscape projects, landscape observatories.

The University of Naples Federico II is one of the founding members of UNISCAPE (the Network of Universities dedicated to the implementation of the European Landscape Convention, www.uniscape.unina.it). It includes 52 European Universities and its aim is to support and reinforce the interdisciplinary co-operation within Europe on landscape issues.

For their nature, landscape contents can have an interdisciplinary approach given both by scientific and humanistic disciplines and research methodologies. Also in the field of literary studies it has been recognized the importance of the analysis of the cultural and literary component of a land in order to attest its history and integrate its perception. Indeed places are not lifeless containers of bonds and feelings, but on the contrary are social and cultural structures produced constantly by their inhabitants.

In full accordance with the articulated configuration of the issues of the landscapes, the investigation group of the Naples Federico II University is characterized by its interdisciplinarity and involves four of the 26 Departments (Dipartimento di Architettura, Dipartimento d'Ingegneria Civile, Edile ed Ambientale, Dipartimento di Scienze Politiche, Dipartimento di Studi Umanistici).

The group is engaged in study and training on topics related to landscape in general and on the landscapes of the Campania Region in particular.

TUESDAY 29TH SEPTEMBER 2015 _ WORKSHOP

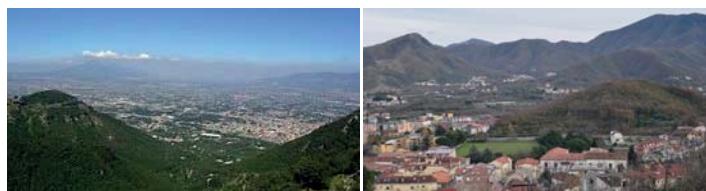

Two design workshops will be organized, in which to creatively interact starting from the observation of concrete cases: the Sarno plain; the Irno valley.

A field trip will be arranged, investigating places at different levels, from landscapes' understanding to iconography and literature inspirations, to questions regarding the recovery of river landscapes, to the solutions carried out so far.

During the focused visit it will be possible to discuss with the involved actors, to examine convergent urban policies and their effects on landscapes, to immerse in values of local culture, to suggest projects of landscape re-appropriation from which to learn, to collectively work in order to interpret river landscapes and propose design solutions.

Groups of participants will produce design concepts on the future of the sites that will be reported in the final session of the conference.

The registration at UNISCAPE en-route conference allows to receive a dropbox link to share useful materials in order to deepen knowledge on the selected sites.
